Ruma Tuakana:

Tupu Tuakana are learning about narrative writing and the parts of a story that make it a great story - the characters, the story setting, the story problem (that makes it interesting or exciting), the resolution and finally the ending. Ask your child about their favourite story and why they like it. See if they can tell you all about the main character and what they are like.

Puawai:

Welcome to week 7. It has been a very busy week for us all. Puawai continue to write amazing narratives.

As a child Jake was fascinated about his grandpa's stories. The reason for this fascination was about surviving World War 2, battling monsters and living at a secret home for special children. But years later, on his 14th birthday, after his Grandpa's death Jake had found a letter that his grandpa had written before he died. Jake went to school and told one of his Grandpa's stories to his class. Jake thought the story to be true but his classmates did not believe him. Was it true or not?

Wijay

The sound of gun fire in the far distance from battles of the Dead, and survivors killing hordes and hordes of Zombies. Glass shattered from the "Dead life forms" who were jumping through barricaded windows trying to get to unknown unarmed survivors trying their hardest to survive. With Zombies roaming the dead town no one was safe anywhere. Smoke from the shops and the burning restaurants filling the once WAS light blue sky now to a dark cloudy day where no living life is to be found, and the crunching of Zombies eating through the dead victims bones and flesh.

Charlamaine

One day there were two men and two dogs. The dogs were Hunter and Max. The men were Jack and Fred. The two friends decided to go on a journey to the green mountains.

Braidon

PB4L

When showing manaaki I need to:

- Demonstrate independence
- Demonstrate enterprise, resourcefulness, reliability & resilience
